Simple Ways To Take The Guesswork Out Of Service Performance...

We have long known that there are two keys to warranty success in any business venture: resolving a consumer-based need and having the resources to deliver a consistent solution for that need. Jireh Scheduling and Research enables companies to gauge and explore the means of delivering their product and services. Our number one purpose is to minimize the guesswork out of service performance by enabling companies with an approach to fulfill measurable service and performance objectives.

Measurable Goals:

Jireh Scheduling and Research can establish assessments to measure product and/or service presentations. Our user-friendly evaluations are accessible within 24-48 hours after an evaluation has been conducted. The findings are presented by statistical charts and/or summarized reports to support quantification of guest-employee relations.

Assessment results are accumulated with all visits; therefore, providing a process to gauge the consistency of prior and successive visits. Results are cumulative observational findings and that are customized to your organizational structure such as: geographical locations, ranking by lowest and highest selling stores, management teams, and/or any other designated specification.

Ways to Present Those Goals:

Service and performance findings can be used to implement new policy, propose manager raise incentives, grant employee bonus incentives, communicate franchise development, coaching and expectations, from a consumer perspective.
